NEWSROOM NOTES— It may never make the best seller list, says Tax Foundation, Inc., but a look through the 789 pages of the House of Representatives' Hearings on Legislative Branch Appropriations can let the taxpayer in on a few of the lesser known dollar-making and dollar-costing activities of the nation's lower chamber.

From 1945 to 1971, House employees had 18 pay increases, according to a page-634 table, averaging all the way from 16 down to 2.9 per cent.

At page 627 the estimated total cost of running the House in F.Y. 1972 is put at $129 million. The figure includes total House officers' and employees' salaries ($22.6 million); contingent expenses ($30.5 million); members' clerk hire ($55.3 million); and compensation for members and their mileage, including the Speaker's expense allowance ($20.5 million).

Of course, the salaries of Representatives didn't start off in their current giant sizes (Representative, $42,500; Speaker, $62,500). On pages 640 and 641, another table shows that in 1789 Representatives got $6 a day, the Speaker, $12.

The 22 special and select House committees of the 91st Congress, according to a page-700 tabulation, were authorized to spend $14.3 million and, up to February of this year, spent $13.3 million.

Largest expenditures were made by these committees: Government Operations ($1.7 million); Education and Labor ($1.4 million); Public Works, and Interstate and Foreign Commerce ($1 million each).

Of the $1 million balance left in committee accounts, one of the smallest sums, $7,542.99, was for the House Restaurant Committee. A representative of that group told his fellow members that the eating places' deficit for 1971 would be nearly $400,000.

An auditor, hired to check into continuing deficits, was reported to have blamed part of the deficit on Congressmen themselves. "many members," declared the committee spokesman, "store frozen food in the storage area (of the restaurants) and they call up and say 'Bring up 10 pounds of this or 5 pounds of that' or something else, which consumes a good bit of record time and work time."

It isn't all outgo, however, for at page 661 a table shows that $8,074.95 was realized by the House by selling 2.6 million pounds of baled waste paper in 1970, the largest monthly amount (295,291 pounds) last December.

New challenge to U.S. aircraft

SAIGON (AP)— North Vietnam stepped up its challenge to U.S. air superiority in Indochina today by moving mobile surface-to-air missile launchers to within a few miles of the demilitarized zone, threatening American planes flying across South Vietnam.

Two new aerial engagements were reported near South Vietnam's borders. In one, an F105 fighter escorting Navy bombers fired a Shrike missile at a missile launching site this morning within three miles of the coast just above the DMZ. The U.S. Command said it was believed that the SAM site was destroyed.

It was the closest air action to South Vietnam's borders in nearly a year and the sixth so-called protective reaction strike inside North Vietnam this year.

U.S. military sources said the North Vietnamese apparently are trying to harass American planes as they cross the northern part of South Vietnam to attack the supply trails in Laos.

In the second incident, an Air Force OV10 observation plane directing air strikes against the Ho Chi Minh trail in southern Laos was the target of an enemy missile while over the area of Sepone, 25 miles west of the Vietnamese borders. The pilot evaded the missile.

"The missile was fired through an overcast," the U.S. Command said, and the pilots were unable to pinpoint the launching site for a retaliatory attack.

In the ground war, North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces kept up their intensified attacks on South Vietnamese outposts for the fourth day.

The South Vietnamese command reported 24 more enemy attacks for a four-day total of 110, the highest in more than three months. Most of the action was in the central highlands, on the central coastal plain and in the Mekong Delta.

The South Vietnamese suffered their worst setback in Kien Hoa Province in the delta, where nine government militiamen were killed and 19 wounded.

In northern Laos, North Vietnamese troops overran two more minor positions within five miles of Long Cheng, the former U.S. Central Intelligence Agency base.

Progovernment irregulars reportedly recaptured the isolated outpost of Phou Cum, 25 miles north of the Plain of Jars, after meeting only token resistance. Phou Cum fell to the North Vietnamese last Monday.

Stage set for final withdrawal

WASHINGTON (AP)— President Nixon's latest Vietnam troop-withdrawal order sets the stage for what could be an April announcement to pull back another 35,000 to 45,000 troops, declare the war over and place remaining GIs in an advisory role.

Nixon announced Thursday that 70,000 more troops will be withdrawn by May 1. The President thus would need to pull out only 35,000 or 45,000 more troops to reach the residual force of 25,000 to 35,000 men he indicated two weeks ago.

Thursday's announcement covering February, March and April withdrawals, will reduce the U.S. commitment in Vietnam to 69,000 men on May 1. And the President said he will make another pullout announcement before that date.

This is likely to come in mid-April, leaving 35,000 men to withdraw before reaching this summer's planned residual force level. That level is expected to be maintained until U.S. prisoners are freed by the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong.

This would be in keeping with the troop-withdrawal plan drawn up by the administration in early 1969. Although administration officials dropped hints from time to time that the President was reviewing the plan and might delay further withdrawal decisions as a means of keeping the enemy guessing, there has been little deviation from the original plan.

Under the phaseout program, the residual force would revert to an advisory role to assist the South Vietnamese.

This would give the President an opportunity to bring home Gen. Creighton Abrams, U.S. commander in Vietnam for the past five years.

Ruling Monday

Associate Judge James Allen, acting as chairman of a Lee County Electoral Board, will rule Monday on a challenge to three nominating petitions for independent county board candidates.

Allen, County Clerk John Stouffer and State's Atty. Albert Kennedy, comprising the board, took the matter under advisement following a hearing yesterday.

Filed Saturday by Ira Kelly, 813 W. Fifth St., the objections allege duplication of signatures and a lack of needed signatures. Objections were filed Saturday against David J. Lahey, 722 S. Highland Ave.; Donald F. Burke, 217 Monroe Ave. and Edward J. Conroy, 805 S. Peoria Ave.

Manhunt for suspect in bank bomb case

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)— A nationwide manhunt was under way today for an AWOL Army enlisted man accused by the FBI of planting time bombs in nine banks.

Named in a federal warrant obtained by the FBI here Thursday was Ronald Kaufman, 33, a native of Milwaukee described as a brilliant student at the University of Wisconsin where he obtained his bachelor's degree, and at Stanford where he won master's and doctoral degrees in psychology. U.S. Magistrate Owen E. Woodruff also set bail at $500,000 if he should be caught.

The FBI placed Kaufman's last known whereabouts at Ft. Polk, La., where he took a month's leave of absence last Dec. 9, with orders to report Jan. 9 at Ft. Jackson, S.C., for shipment overseas. He apparently never reported.

He re-enlisted in the Army at St. Louis last Aug. 10 under the name of James Edward Jensen, said FBI director J. Edgar Hoover in announcing the manhunt in Washington. Kaufman previously had served in the Army under his own name from February 1956 to February 1958, the FBI said.

The FBI says Kaufman is the Christopher Charles Mohr who rented safety deposit boxes a year ago in nine banks—three here, three in Chicago and three in New York—in which low-power, long-term time bombs were planted. One went off last Labor Day weekend in a branch of the Bank of America in San Francisco. Mohr has been sought since that date, the FBI said.

Two other bombs were found last week in banks here, three others in Chicago, and three more in New York.

Fingerprints and handwriting on the box access applications match those of Kaufman, the complaint said.

Letters sent anonymously from Chicago were received by news media here and in Chicago, telling of the bombs, describing them and warning that more sophisticated and powerful devices could be used in the future to force authorities to "free all political prisoners." Kaufman's known handwriting also matches the neat lettering on the anonymous letters sent to newsmen, the FBI said.

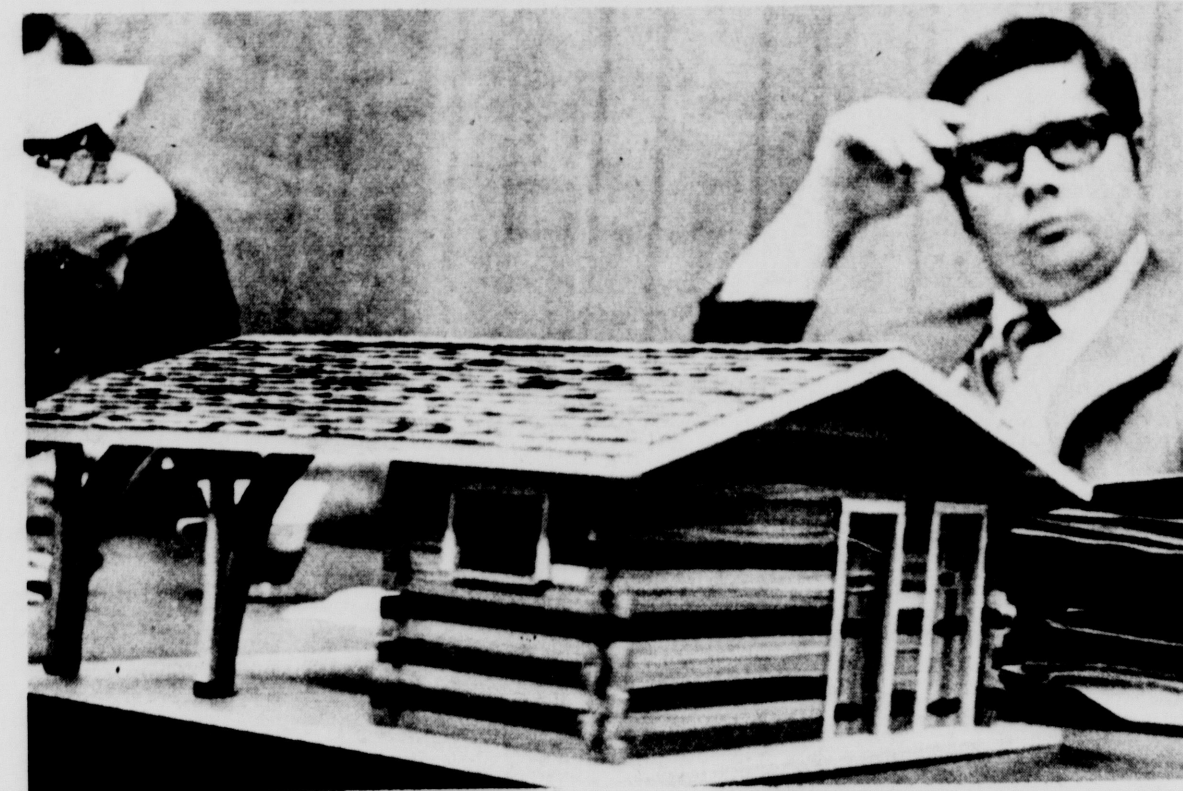

The search for Kaufman appeared to center in Chicago, where the warning letters were mailed and where Kaufman was reported by Chicago newspapers as having been close to Yippie leader Abbie Hoffman.

Kaufman is charged with 12 felony counts. They are three counts each of: attempting to damage a building used in interstate commerce—the banks, unlawful use of the mails to threaten property damage with explosives, making false statements in renting the safety deposit boxes and possession of prohibited explosive devices.

Authorities said additional charges may be filed.

If convicted, Kaufman could face a possible total of 81 years in prison and $90,000 in fines.

One of several proposed shelters for Lowell Park got a thorough going over by Park Board member Dan Moats. Park Board members, meeting Thursday night, heard Chuck Johnson, representing Cedar-Forest Products, Polo, discuss different structures. A donation of $10,000 was received from Dixon National Bank for the shelter which should be completed some time this summer. (Telegraph Photo)

Pool ban against DSS residents is lifted

A 1958 ordinance which banned the use of Dixon Memorial Pool by Dixon State School residents was repealed by Park Board members during their regular meeting Thursday night. The repeal, in ordinance form, was passed in a matter of minutes without discussion. Their action puts the board in line with a recently passed house bill which forbids discrimination by race, color, creed or physical or mental handicap.

In other board action, the apparent low bid on a utility tractor was ignored in favor of another which, in Superintendent Lloyd Swan's words, "better meets the specifications required."

A bid of $3,300 from Forster Implements,

Dixon, got the nod from members after it was learned that the tractor that firm bid was adaptable with other equipment owned by the district. A low bid of $3,293 was submitted by Woodrows Implement.

Swan explained the additional equipment will be needed because of expected acquisition of more lands under the district's master plan.

Insurance covering wind and fire damage for certain buildings came under discussion after it was learned that certain parts of the policy needed updating. Swan was instructed by board members to further pursue the matter. The present yearly premium is $830.

Soviets expel U.S. Congressman

MOSCOW (AP)— The Soviet Union ordered today the immediate expulsion of a visiting U.S. congressman who attended a dinner at the home of a Jewish professor trying to emigrate to Israel.

Rep. James H. Scheuer, a New York Democrat, was held for two hours by police after the dinner Wednesday night. He has left Moscow for Leningrad.

The U.S. Embassy said the order for Scheuer's expulsion was delivered by Georgy Kornienko, chief of the U.S. section of the Soviet Foreign ministry.

Kornienko stated that the Soviet government was expelling Mr. Scheuer for engaging in improper activities while visiting the Soviet Union as a member of the subcommittee of the House of Representatives, headed by Congressman Brademas and sponsored by the U.S. government, an embassy statement said.

Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., headed the congressional group.

"The Foreign Ministry demanded that Congressman

Scheuer leave the Soviet Union immediately," the embassy statement continued.

Scheuer is believed to be the first elected American official ever expelled from the Soviet Union.

Scheuer came to the Soviet Union as a member of a seven-member congressional subcommittee to study Soviet education. The subcommittee ended its two-week tour on Wednesday. That night Scheuer went to the apartment of the professor and was picked up there by the secret police. He was released later.

Scheuer went to Leningrad on Thursday and is believed to still be there.

In Washington, an aide of Scheuer confirmed that the congressman is still in Leningrad and that he planned to leave by train, presumably today, for Helsinki, Finland.

An embassy spokesman said a U.S. official was summoned to the Foreign Ministry this morning and told of the expulsion order. He added that Scheuer would probably leave the Soviet Union from Leningrad rather than come back to Moscow, but that no deadline had been set for Scheuer's departure.

Scheuer was having dinner at the home of Prof. Alexander Lerner when he was taken into custody by two Soviet policemen.

He told newsmen after his two-hour detention that the policemen came to the Lerner's door and said they were searching the neighborhood for a criminal who might be masquerading as a foreigner.

In addition to the Machinists, some workers in the United Auto Workers union are affected by the contracts.

No controls on those making less than $1.90 per hour, says report

WASHINGTON (UP)— The Cost of Living Council has proposed that persons making less than $1.90 an hour be exempted from wage controls, Pay Board sources say.

The sources say the board has asked the council for more information. The council sought the Pay Board's comments on the idea even though board approval is not required.

The proposal surfaced as the wage panel voted 14 to 0 to approve procedures under which all pay raises lost during the wage freeze will be paid retroactively unless specifically stopped by the board.

Under these procedures the board will approve automatic payment of many raises up to 7 per cent, but will take a look at several raises above that amount and all raises in pay units of more than 5,000 persons, no matter how small the increase.

On the matter of exemptions, the Cost of Living Council earlier had lifted federal wage restraints from all persons making less than the federal minimum wage, which is $1.30 for agricultural workers, $1.60 for others.

However, Congress has ordered that President Nixon also exempt anyone belonging to the "working poor," a term without any precise definition.

Various sources said the council, which retains authority over exemptions from wage and price controls, proposed that the line be drawn at $1.90 an hour.

Labor members of the board were reported pushing for a much higher figure, but apparently without much hope of success.

Council spokesmen declined to comment on the matter. Pay Board chairman George H. Boldt abstained from voting on the retroactive pay release, but afterward "congratulated his colleagues on their unanimity of purpose and their prompt action," a news release said.

Acting finally on the contracts covering aerospace workers, the board voted Thursday to give the two unions involved a plan that would stretch their 12-per-cent raise over two years instead of one. The first-year increase under the board plan would be 8 per cent, retroactive up to 26 weeks on some contracts.

The second year of the contract would raise pay 7 per cent, and would include a cost-of-living hike, according to board calculations.

But, in Los Angeles, union officials said they will press court action to get the full 12 per cent at once. One leader, Jim Quillan of Local 727 of the International Association of Machinists, said the ruling will "make Lockheed workers and others in aerospace a second-class work force."

On Wall Street

NEW YORK (AP)—Stock prices strengthened in today's market after being soft at the opening. Trading was fairly active, despite a brief lull in the morning.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up .30 to 905.48 at noon.

Declines on the Big Board clung to a narrow lead over advances.

Analysts said that profit-taking seemed to be drying up in the wake of Thursday's downturn.

They also noted that the market might react to cuts by some commercial banks in their floating prime rates after it becomes clearer whether other banks would follow. The cut was from 5 to 4 3/4 per cent.

Brokers reported a good many investors remain on the sidelines.

Electronics and rubber issues were off, but airlines showed strength. Other groups were mostly mixed.

Wrong house bulldozed

Ted won't be delegate to Demo convention

By BILL KOSMAN
Associated Press Writer

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, consistently mentioned as a presidential possibility despite his denials of White House aspirations, says he will not be a delegate to the Democratic National Convention this summer but will be active at the session.

In a surprise development Thursday night, Kennedy said in Boston he felt it would be misleading if he headed a slate of his state's delegates to the national convention in Miami. He said people might think it was to "serve some other purpose."

It had been expected that Kennedy would head Massachusetts' at-large convention delegate slate.

The senator filed an affidavit disavowing his candidacy, a move necessary to remove his name from the April 25 Massachusetts presidential primary ballot.

However, Kennedy said he expects to be "active over the period of the next several weeks and months and at the convention."

Three students named to Sauk Valley committee

Three Sauk Valley College freshmen from Sterling, have been named to a committee to help administer the 1971-72 Student Achievement Recognition Program launched earlier this month on the college campus.

Named to the committee are: Deborah Howard, Steve Reyes, and Dave Weissenburger.

The students were appointed by Gerald W. Cias, coordinator of the awards program for Sauk Valley College. They will assist Cias in phases of the program's administration. Their primary function will be to act as a liaison among students, college faculty, and judges.

The committee will also help supervise the final judging process next February at which time two Sauk Valley College students, one man and one woman, will be chosen as winners of the campus competition.

The winners will be those two individuals who the judges feel have best demonstrated noteworthy achievement toward their desired career goals and who have shown leadership qualities in their studies and through participation in campus and community activities.

As candidates and noncandidates scrambled around many of the nation's 23 primary-election states—either entering or withdrawing their names—others carried on their politicking unabashedly.

Democrat George Wallace ran headon into party stalwart Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey after launching what the Alabama governor called a people's campaign in the Florida presidential primary.

"I defeated Wallace in this state in 1968 and hope to do as well again," Humphrey, of Minnesota, told a Jacksonville audience Thursday while pushing his own campaign for the state's March 14 contest.

A dozen candidates are listed on the Florida primary ballot.

Meanwhile, Sen. Vance Hartke of Indiana accused the news media of slighting his bid for the Democratic presidential nomination. "I'm only an underdog with you people," Hartke said at a New York news conference. He predicted he will win the New Hampshire primary.

On a three-day campaign swing through Wisconsin, Sen.

Henry M. Jackson of Washington maintained he offers the best hope of luring disenchanted Democrats back into the fold and of defeating President Nixon in November. Jackson is expected to compete for Wisconsin's national convention delegates in a crowded Democratic field.

Ghana chief's mistake

Austerity for army

ACCRA, Ghana (AP)—Ghana's deposed prime minister appears to have made one major mistake—he applied his austerity program to the army.

Lt. Col. I. K. Acheampong, leader of the army coup which overthrew Ghana's two-year-old civilian government Thursday, accused Prime Minister Kofi Busia of hypocrisy, government mismanagement and corruption.

He specifically charged Busia with undermining the army's morale by taking away privileges it enjoyed even in the days of Kwame Nkrumah, the free-spending dictator ousted by the army and police in February 1966.

As part of his austerity program to help pay the foreign debt of nearly $800 million that Nkrumah ran up, Busia reduced military pay and special allowances and opportunities for training overseas.

SVC scholarship plan approved

Nosotros la Gente ("We, The People"), a student service club on the Sauk Valley campus, has received the approval of the Sauk Valley College Foundation to establish a continuing scholarship in the memory of the club's first president, Rene Carmona.

Carmona was killed in an automobile accident in Iowa between the Christmas and New Year holidays. A sophomore at Sauk Valley, he was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Miguel Carmona, Sterling.

The Foundation, a non-profit educational corporation, established the Carmona Memorial Scholarship Fund at its January meeting following a request from club officers. They included: Anthony Barajas, vice-president; Cristina Quinones, secretary; and Marina Lopez, scholarship chairman.

Initial donations to the fund, including a grant from the club, currently stands at $50. Additional contributions are being sought to allow the fund to provide an annual scholarship valued at $300. Anyone interested in contributing may send donations to the Carmona Memorial Scholarship Fund in care of the Sauk Valley College Foundation, Rt. 1, Dixon.

The purpose of the scholarship is to enable a student of Latin American descent to have the opportunity to attain a goal of higher education at Sauk Valley College.

Personal property tax effort fails

By MICHAEL ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer
SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — A last-ditch effort to keep most personal property tax bills out of the mail in June 1973 has failed in the Illinois General Assembly.

An hour before the close of the two-day January legislative session Thursday night, the two parties in the Senate appeared to reach agreement, then fell once again into sharp dispute. The vote on the final package was 29-5, one vote short of a majority.

At first, it seemed a compromise $7,500 property tax exemption sponsored by Sen. Hudson Sours, R-Peoria, would bring quick agreement on easing the unpopular levy, which was abolished for individuals by a 1970 statewide referendum but restored by an Illinois Supreme Court ruling.

But Democrats, led by Sens. James Donnewald of Bressa and Thomas G. Lyons of Chicago, held out for further consideration of the plan when the lawmakers return in April.

Donnewald, joined by the rest of the downstate Democratic Senate delegation, presented a plan to exempt non-income-producing property, plus cattle, grain and farm machinery.

But the Donnewald measure was easily beaten by Republicans in the politically deadlocked upper chamber.

All the while, the House—which had concluded the rest of its January business—waited to take up the expected tax relief bill from the Senate. It never came.

Once it became evident that the Senate would not pass property tax relief, both chambers quickly adjourned. They reconvene March 1 to hear Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie's budget message and then again go home until April 10.

At that time, Republicans will be waiting with a bill sponsored by Rep. James Nowlan, R-Roulon, which would exempt a wide range of farm and other property from the tax.

But the battle appeared to be the last chance for the lawmakers to head off personal property tax bills in 1973.

Assessors will make their evaluation this April on which 1973 bills will be based.

Only the unlikely possibility of a special session called by Ogilvie or an unexpected court decision could head off the mailing of those bills.

The debate on the Sours measure, which in the words of the Peoria conservative would apply to "both corporate and two-legged persons," was punctuated by debate concerning ballot box reprisals in November.

Sen. John Gilbert, R-Carbondale, said he favored the Sours bill but was glad to see Southern Illinois Democrats opposing it.

"I'm the only Republican senator from south of Springfield," he said, "and I can tell you this will help."

Sours warned that if the measure went "down to perdition ... I'm going to tell the story over and over and I'm going to name the names."

Donnewald shot back that there is "a two-way street on letting the people back home know how you voted."

In the Illinois Legislature

Ogilvie veto is overridden

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — The Illinois Legislature has overridden Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie's veto of a bill for nomination of judges in partisan primary elections.

The override, coming Thursday as one of the last General Assembly actions before adjournment to March 1, thwarted apparently impending Illinois Supreme Court appointment of more than 100 judges.

Sen. Terry Bruce, D-Olney, sponsor of the final action in the Senate, quoted Ogilvie in his veto message as advocating nomination and election of judges on a nonpartisan basis.

Bruce said the canceling of the veto was a last-ditch assertion of a legislative prerogative under the 1970 Illinois Constitution to affirm how judges were to be chosen.

If the bill were not made law, Bruce said, the Legislature would have surrendered to the state Supreme Court the power to fill more than 100 vacant judicial posts by appointment. The state has about 800 judges when at full strength.

Bruce said Supreme Court appointment was the only constitutional avenue left for filling vacancies without a legislative enactment to get judges nominated either by primary election or by petitions.

"The veto of this bill left no way for judges to get on the ballot" in the general elections, said Bruce of the measure sponsored in the House by Rep. Richard O. Hart, D-Benton. "I opt to put judges in the primary election process so that they face the public."

"It is not asking too much that they face primary opponents in their initial selection," Bruce added of judicial candidates. "Thereafter they can run for re-election without an adversary."

The Constitution requires a 60 per cent favorable vote to win such re-election.

The vote to override in the Senate was 45-1, with only 35 votes needed. In the House, the vote was 112-18, with 107 required.

Ethics bill to governor

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie, who this week declared "there is no excuse for delay" in passing ethics legislation, has before him today a bill calling for strict income disclosures by thousands of government officials.

In less than an hour Thursday both houses of the General Assembly pushed through an ethics bill fashioned into its final form by a House-Senate conference committee. It was then sent to the governor.

Political observers agreed that the bill—largely the work of House Speaker W. Robert Blair, R-Park Forest—is stronger in its income-disclosure provisions than an existing 1967 law, but some have doubted whether it's strong enough for the governor.

"I'll sign any bill that's the strongest that the Legislature can pass," Ogilvie has said repeatedly.

The bill, which Senate Pro Tem Cecil Partee, D-Chicago, has called a "workable and enforceable piece of legislation," extends the income-disclosure machinery into the judiciary and down to the local government level where it may affect tens of thousands of government officials.

After a few minutes of debate, the Senate passed the measure with only one dissenting vote—that of Sen. Hudson Sours, R-Peoria, who cautioned that Ogilvie could rewrite the entire bill and resubmit it to the Legislature under his amendatory veto power. If that happens, it would take a three-fifths vote to override the veto.

Some 30 minutes after the Senate action, the House heard numerous objections to the bill from its members, but then passed it 170-1 with the only negative vote coming from Rep. Carl T. Hunsicker, R-Pontiac.

"This is a good, strong, workable and enforceable piece of legislation. It embraces all levels of government," Partee told newsmen. "I hope nothing intervenes in the process of this excellent legislation becoming law."

It is possible that Ogilvie will use his amendatory veto power to change the face of the legislation, but some statehouse sources have said that such a move could leave him wide open for charges that he is blocking the enactment of an ethics law which he has virtually demanded.

The legislation, which encompasses a wide range of officials including the judiciary and members of various boards of the state's colleges and universities, would require state officials to make public:

—The name and ownership of any entity doing business in Illinois if the official's income from it is more than $5,000 or dividends are more than $1,200.

—The nature of professional services and the nature of the entity if fees of more than $5,000 are received per year.

—The name and description of any capital assets from which a capital gain of $5,000 or more was realized during the preceding calendar year.

Threatens fine against newspapers

CHICAGO (AP) — A U.S. District Court judge has threatened to fine three Chicago newspapers $1,000 a day if information previously published by them causes a mistrial in an Internal Revenue Service bribery case.

Judge Thomas R. McMillen made the remark Thursday after defense lawyers moved for a mistrial on the basis of an article printed in the Tribune, Sun-Times and Daily News.

The article concerned George R. Bieber, 64, who is charged with bribery along with three other men.

The newspapers reported allegations made in the original indictment but deleted in a superseding indictment.

Judge McMillen dismissed the motion for a mistrial but said, "It costs $1,000 a day to run this courtroom. If the newspapers are going to cause a mistrial, they are going to be assessed $1,000 a day in costs of the trial."

The judge interviewed each juror individually in his chambers to determine if the articles prejudiced any juror's opinion.

He said the article in the Daily News was written by a reporter who "is not only incompetent but has no right to be in a courtroom."

The article was written by Edward Kandlik, a newsman since 1930 who has covered the Federal Building since 1965.

Don't overlook miscellaneous tax deductions

By RAY DE CRANE

Unfortunately, many taxpayers quickly pass over the "Miscellaneous" deduction category on their tax return.

This is a tragic oversight. There is a treasure house of deductions here. Consider them carefully. Here are some possibilities for you to consider:

Child care or invalid care payments.

Storm, fire, auto accident and theft losses.

Unreimbursed work expense, such as the purchase and cleaning of required uniforms and special work clothes not readily adaptable to regular street wear, purchase of rubber and asbestos gloves used in special occupations, safety equipment, tools and supplies used in certain craft occupations, deductions to your employer's property.

Union dues.

Fees paid an employment agency for obtaining a job.

Educational expenses, if the training was to maintain or improve skills required on the job or to meet your employer's specific job requirements or if required by law or regulation to keep your status. Such expenses undertaken initially to qualify you for a job—such as nurse's training—or to qualify you for a better job are not deductible.

Alimony if paid to your former wife in periodic payments in accordance with a court decree.

Unreimbursed entertainment expense if required by the nature of your work.

Expenses incurred in connection with the production or collection of income. If you are an investor, you may deduct the fees paid an investment counselor, subscriptions to financial publications, or the rental of a safety deposit box to protect your securities.

Tax counsel fees paid to a tax adviser.

Uninsured casualty losses are deductible to the extent they exceed $100. In other words, the first $100 of loss is on you. After that it is deductible.

Crash near plant entrance

OREGON — Ogle County sheriff's police investigated an accident at 12:35 p.m. Thursday on a gravel road, near the Kysor Plant, Byron. Margaret Schreiber, 21, Rockford, apparently blacked out as she came out of the plant's parking lot. Her auto went out of control, crossed the center line and went into a ditch and struck a utility pole.

Estimated damage to the car was $250. The driver was taken to Rockford Memorial Hospital.

Lawmakers ignore ballot warning

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Before adjourning until March 1, the Illinois lawmakers did themselves a favor which both Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie and a federal court had warned against.

They approved Thursday night legislation giving themselves the top ballot position in the primary contests that many of them must undergo March 21.

"You can figure you get an extra 5 per cent of the vote by having your name first on the ballot," a longtime statehouse observer said. "That's the rule of thumb."

The argument is that many voters, unfamiliar with names and issues, become bewildered and simply cast their ballot for the first name they see.

Rep. Arthur Simmons, R-Skokie, sponsor of the measure, argued in House debate that he would rather see lawmakers decide the issue than Ogilvie or a court. The governor already vetoed the bill once and the latest vote overrode that veto.

Rep. Brian Duff, R-Wilmette, added the bill would give the favored top ballot spot to men of "proven responsibility."

But Rep. Ray Ewell, D-Chicago, countered sarcastically that the action was the "height of hypocrisy."

"We have 170 people who say they believe in ethics," Ewell said, "and yet at the very first turn they make this very unethical move."

The House voted 109-27 to override the veto and the Senate, with considerably less debate, approved the action, 35-7.

Until recently it was a custom for the secretary of state to accord top ballot position to incumbents.

But this practice was barred recently by a decision of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

In that ruling, the court held that the courtesy extended by the late Secretary of State Paul Powell to his old legislative colleagues was unfair to political newcomers.

Secretary of State John W. Lewis has instituted new procedures under which ballot position is awarded on a first-come-first serve basis. Ties are broken by lottery.

The lottery, which involves equipment similar to that found in bingo parlors, was held Tuesday.

Numbered ping pong balls were shaken in a funnel-shaped plastic container. Then the balls were poured out one at a time.

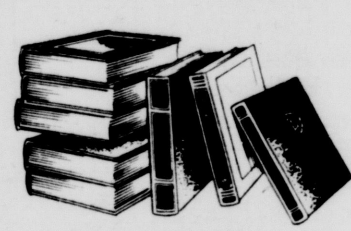

Names of persons involved in a primary race whose nominating petitions were filed simultaneously had already been listed in alphabetical order.

For example, the names of five Republican House candidates who filed simultaneously from the 35th District around Freeport had been listed in alphabetical order.

The first name on the list was that of Howard J. Brentner of Freeport.

But the first ball to fall out of the plastic container was No. 5, thus making Brentner's name the last on the list.

The second name on the list was that of F.E. "Gene" Burke of Freeport. He was lucky. He got ball No. 1, giving him top position.

Wonderful country

We had a great system going which has been betrayed by a group of power hungry rich men. If they can form a one-world government they can control all the people of the world. Some of these men furnished vast sums of money to help establish the communistic governments of both Russia and China.

Now if they can socialize America these three countries can form a government to subjugate the people of all the world.

The above statement seems fantastic. Why would anyone prefer slavery to freedom? Controls for everything we do are formulated by a few men who have one desire to possess vast sums of money. They can then tell all the people how they are to live, where you are to work, have informers living among you in order to tell the leaders where trouble will commence so that the real thinkers in our country can be eliminated.

These few rich men desire to have on their side the leaders in both the Democratic and Republican Parties in order to debase our finances and create inflation. They furnish money to any group that will cause riots or adverse decisions.

If we elect men who will fight for our constitutional rights then we will be on the right track. Many laws are passed for the insiders. If our Congress would eliminate those laws such as the Federal Reserve System, which is not a federal or a reserve system, it just helps certain bankers make vast sums of money. The people on the inside will profit whether stocks go up or down provided they know how the federal reserve system is going to increase or decrease the amount of money in circulation.

The federal reserve system should be replaced with a fiscal structure which does not violate the fixed responsibility of our government as set forth in Article I Section 8 of the United States Constitution.

The tax-exempted foundations were created for the sole purpose of the ultra rich. Their vast sums of money are used to sway elections, finance riots, degrade our schools, etc. Many good deeds are promoted with some of their revenues, but in a total analysis they are a detriment to America.

The Communists engineered the United Nations and they are the main beneficiaries. The Soviets insisted that the headquarters be in America, which gave their spy system greater opportunities to steal our secrets. The entire site for the United Nations was donated by the Rockefeller. The United Nations charter was written so that eventually it overrides the sovereign independence of its member nations. It subjugates them to a world court of military force of the United Nations.

Ben T. Shaw

Too much protest

Women who defy the nation's male-dominated society can expect to be treated as "something of a dirty joke." So claims women's liberationist Gloria Steinem, writing in the new feminist magazine "Ms.," which she edits.

"Ms." is an abbreviation of a nonexistent word pronounced "miz" used before the name of a female who may or may not be married but whose marital status is nobody's business and anyway has nothing to do with her basic value as a human being.

"There seems to be no punishment inside the white male club that quite equals the ridicule and personal viciousness reserved for women who rebel," says Ms. Steinem. "... Any woman who chooses to behave like a full human being should be warned that the armies of the status quo will treat her as something of a dirty joke."

Now if Ms. Steinem literally means "club" and is referring to the attempted forced sexual integration of male-only facilities, she is probably quite right. But if by "club" she means the business or professional world, she is quite wrong.

There is prejudice and discrimination against women. But it has been a number of years since anything like ridicule or viciousness greeted the woman who was determined to succeed in a man's world.

If proof of that is needed, it is found in abundance in the obituary of Dr. Lillian M. Gilbreth, mother of the family made famous by the book and movie, "Cheaper by the Dozen," who died recently at the age of 93.

While raising six sons and six daughters, Dr. Gilbreth earned several college degrees, became a brilliant industrial engineer and management consultant and a pioneer with her husband in the field of time and motion study, continuing with the business after the death of her husband—all during the post-Victorian years of the early part of the century and, to repeat, all while rearing a dozen children.

For a fact, there's the difference between Dr. Gilbreth and Ms. Steinem, or between many other successful career women and the latter-day libbers—children. Or even a husband—that is, life partner.

Dr. Gilbreth did, however, detest cooking.

No Hands!

By RALPH de TOLEDANO

When the admission of Communist China to the United Nations was being debated, it was argued that "you can't ignore half a continent." It was also said that once in the U.N. mainland China would be more responsive to world opinion and subject to diplomatic pressures which, as an "outlaw" state, she had in the past brushed aside.

Now that the Communist Chinese have replaced Taiwan in the Security Council and the General Assembly, we are hearing a new kind of argument. Red China's transgressions against international decency should be ignored or played down in order not to irritate Mao Tse-tung or make waves at the U.N. The possibility, therefore, that any U.N. member will raise the issue of the illegal Chinese trade in drugs is highly remote.

Yet that traffic, most of it aimed at the United States and multiplying in size with each passing month, is a serious danger to the world. This commerce in slow death, moreover, is clearly an instrument of Communist policy. Not an acre of poppies would be grown, not a pound of opium manufactured, if Peking did not sanction and encourage it. Nor would any opium or its derivatives be smuggled out of the country.

The traffic continues because Chairman Mao and Premier Chou En-lai want it. It provides them millions of dollars in foreign exchange and, more important to them, wreaks havoc on the free world. For this reason, the acreage devoted to opium production has been sharply increased and the number of opium refineries has gone up from 3 to 20.

The statistics of the drug traffic are frightening. The Narcotics Bureau of the Hong Kong Police Department will tell you that the amount of dope seized in 1971 as it came from Communist China was almost 1,000 per cent greater than it was in 1970.

In 1970, the Hong Kong police seized 1,400 lbs. of narcotics being smuggled into the Crown Colony from China. In 1971, seizures rose to more than 13,000 lbs., with no greater efforts at interception of the illegal traffic. For political reasons, the British are reluctant to discuss narcotics smuggling from Communist China. But they did acknowledge that much of the dope passing through Hong Kong is destined for the United States. From other sources, it is easy to learn that the biggest of Red China's four pipelines for narcotics runs from Yunnan province into Hong Kong.

American sources in Saigon disclose that most of the heroin and other "hard" drugs taken from U.S. troops in Vietnam were refined by a process used exclusively in mainland China. Obviously, Chairman Mao peddles more than the bright sayings so often quoted by his admirers. There is some irony in the fact that so many young people who have accepted Mao's philosophy show their gratitude by buying his drugs.

Much could be accomplished against the Communist narcotics traffic if charges were made of death-peddling and slow genocide at the United Nations. Peking's representatives would bluster their denials and veto any resolutions of condemnation. But the debate itself would be of value and might embarrass Peking sufficiently to put a crimp on the Communist manufacture of narcotics and the traffic itself.

However, the United Nations demonstrates its morality only when it is dealing with small nations or those with little influence in international councils. It has yet to take action against India's defiance on the Kashmir issue or the illegal invasion and seizure of Goa by Indian troops, but it thunders against Israeli measures of self defense. To date, the U.N. has failed to take significant action against any threats to the peace involving major powers.

How then can it be expected to take a stand against the narcotics depredations of Red China. If the United States were to introduce a resolution of censure—which it is not about to do—the other U.N. members would run for cover. Even the Soviet Union, which exchanges harsh words with China, usually stays within the bounds of ideological debate. The Kremlin has offered figures to show that Red China has slaughtered millions—but it has never invoked the Genocide Convention. So the Communist Chinese will continue their traffic in slow death unchallenged.

Tube's repetition

By BRUCE BLOSSAT

WASHINGTON (NEA) — A lot of people tell us these are exciting times. Given the high pace of change and the turbulence of world and national affairs, it is hard to argue otherwise. Yet America, for one, is managing to make the whole thing seem a colossal bore.

We hear how marvelous it is that television is showing us more "actuality" than we could ever hope to see before. We're all "better informed" than Americans of earlier days.

Even when a war is fought 10,000 miles away, as in the case of Vietnam, we now have some idea what it is really like. We see protest marches, city council debates, an endless parade of public figures at all levels of government. We go inside hospitals, schools, factories.

Obviously, some of this is indeed intensely interesting. And most of us could never spend the time or travel enough to get over personally the ground television covers for us.

Nevertheless, the net of it is that Americans are on the way to boring each other into glaze-eyed stupor.

Maybe there's too much of everything. With the constant help of the tube, we are talking ourselves to death.

I don't really care if I ever hear another live telecast of a city council shout-and-shove match. The drug abuse issue is important to everybody, but most discussions of it are deadly.

President Nixon's economic Phase II has automatic interest for every American. Still, the talkers are running the subject into the ground. I'm ready for Phase III right now. It's got to be better.

Most of television's "specials" don't seem very special any more. Inevitably, there are exceptions. Most, however, go over old ground. With each new presidential election, the writing press and television go for heavier and heavier overkill. You watch. In 1972 the whole business will be getting under way at halftime in the Rose Bowl game.

It's frightening and dismaying that we probably are in for new depths of smothering boredom in the campaign ahead.

You can't blame it all on the candidates' alleged lack of excitement, as some observers appear ready to do. Most certainly won't be exciting, and they'll talk too much and wear us out.

But we'll wear them out, too. The reporters will ask them the same questions over and over. The "how do you feel?" television newscasters will be poking their stick microphones under the candidates' nostrils at every wayside airport stop from now until next November.

It IS too much. Nothing lasts on television, especially when put to the supreme test of endless repetition.

I know some thoughtful politicians who think campaigns, by their nature, are unsuited to television's "actuality." Repetition is built in. We don't endure it in other fields, so why should we in this? Would we still be laughing at a Neil Simon comedy if we saw it 15 times in two months?

I'm not sure, though, that repetition and excess account altogether for our growing boredom. I suspect that there is a terrible lack of freshness in our approaches to problems which should challenge and stir us. If our discussions of vital issues are dull, our "solutions" seem insipid and uninteresting. For all their ferment, the kids aren't much help, either. Their particular excesses are only briefly intriguing. And there is no zip in their warmed-over Marxism.

Americans have too little to say that's really new. Old words are always boring, especially when flashed to us endlessly on that tube.

Plot for Brooke

By MARIANNE MEANS

WASHINGTON (KFS) — There is a secret plot afoot to have Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., nominated from the floor as President Richard Nixon's running mate at the Republican National Convention this summer.

It would be purely a symbolic move, designed to create an impact on the millions of voters who will be watching the convention over television. Mounting a serious challenge to Vice President Spiro Agnew, who was publicly endorsed by the President for a second term, is currently not a realistic goal.

Both the White House and Sen. Brooke have given tacit approval for the scheme. But initial impetus has come from Massachusetts friends of Brooke and from Arthur Fletcher, a former Nixon administration official who is currently head of the Negro College Fund.

The White House is fond of publicity stunts, and the nomination of the first black politician to sit in the Senate in this century offers something for everybody. It would presumably demonstrate that the GOP is not the narrow, insular party its critics contend but a broad umbrella under which all races and creeds fit comfortably.

It might even make black voters and liberals overlook the administration's feeble record on behalf of civil rights.

It would be a unifying gesture in the direction of the party's liberal wing, which has been rudderless but resentful since its chief spokesman, Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, decided to stop fighting Nixon and join him. It might quiet the strident Ripon Society, which all unknowing of the scheme pleaded for a Brooke Vice Presidency in its last newsletter.

It would draw a contrast for the benefit of TV viewers between the GOP and the Democrats, whose leading Presidential candidate, Sen. Edmund Muskie, said he couldn't be elected with a black running mate. And, by creating a mock battle, it might arouse new interest in a convention that otherwise may be dead-ly dull.

There are political gains for Sen.

Brooke in the exercise also. He is up for re-election next fall, and the national TV exposure will help his campaign. In addition, he may acquire new nationwide stature which could enable him to seize leadership for the party's liberals and maneuver toward a position on the Presidential ticket four years hence.

The President and Sen. Brooke have already cooperated on two similar but less spectacular publicity exercises. It was well publicized that the President asked Brooke to become Secretary of Housing and Urban Development shortly before the Inauguration and later asked Brooke to become a Supreme Court justice. On both occasions the President tendered the offer only after he knew that Brooke was not interested in accepting. But the President made points for being willing to elevate a Negro to the highest government levels, and Brooke gained by appearing to be sought after by a President.

Sen. Brooke moved quickly last month to squelch the beginnings of a write-in campaign for him for Vice President in New Hampshire. Such an effort could jeopardize the convention nomination plan. If it succeeded, the President might decide Brooke was a threat and block the convention plan. If it failed, Brooke might seem so lacking in popular support the Massachusetts delegation might refuse to go along and enter his name in nomination.

As it is, Brooke is now expected to exert enough influence over his home state delegation to carry out the nomination plan. In addition to Massachusetts, he may attract enough votes from liberal delegates in other states to make a respectable showing against Agnew. There will be, of course, no possibility that he could actually win. The President wants a conservative, white running mate, and he will have one.

The Brooke play, if carried out, could prove extremely effective politics. But the public is increasingly sensitive to phony gimmicks and if this is seen for what it is, it will surely backfire.

Henkel-Schlesinger nuptial vows

WEST BROOKLYN—St. Mary's Catholic Church was the setting for the Dec. 25 marriage of Miss Jeanne Henkel, daughter of the Robert Henkels, Compton, to Gale Schlesinger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Delph Schlessinger, Sublette.

The double-ring wedding was performed by the Rev. Lawrence London, and members of "The Group" provided nuptial music. Decorations for the ceremony featured lighted Christmas trees and arrangements of poinsettias.

Velvet Gown
For her wedding, the bride chose a floor-length gown of white velvet complemented by a cathedral-length mantilla of illusion bordered in Venetian lace. The gown's empire bodice, which topped a bell skirt, was styled with a lace-edged Victorian neckline and bishop sleeves.

As she approached the altar with her father, the bride carried a nosegay of white and pink Elegance carnations, miniature pink roses, fern sprays and holly.

Mrs. Sue Haum, who attended her sister as matron of honor, and the bridesmaids, Miss Pamela Henkel and Miss Sue Henkel, were attired in ruby-red velvet gowns, and their headresses were Dior bows of matching velvet encircled by three tiers of veiling. The green wicker baskets they carried held bouquets of pink, fuchsia and white carnations, French heather and foliage.

For the ceremony, Mrs. Henkel wore a rose and white Polyester gown with black accessories, and the bridegroom's mother selected a formal plum-colored gown and matching accessories. Their flowers were corsages of Cymbidium orchids.

Gary Politsch attended Mr. Schlesinger as best man, and serving as groomsmen were the bridegroom's brother, Randall Schlesinger, and Michael Henkel. Ushering was done by Jerry Henkel, brother of the bride, and Terry Halsey.

The service was followed by a reception in the Sublette Community Hall when 300 guests were registered. Decorations in the bride's chosen colors trimmed the hall, and a wreath of carnations and foliage encircled the base of a five-tiered wedding cake, which centered the reception table.

The bridegroom's parents also entertained 26 guests at a Dec. 23 dinner at the Curl Inn, Triumph, following the wedding rehearsal.

Wedding Trip
For their wedding trip, the bride wore a frock combining a pink crepe skirt and a bodice of Burgundy velvet. A 1970 graduate of Mendota Township High School, she was an employee of Black Brothers Company, Mendota, prior to her marriage.

Mr. Schlesinger, a graduate of Carthage College, Kenosha, Wis., is employed by the Department of Interior, Bureau of Indian Affairs. He is presently teaching fourth-grade physical education and coaching basketball at Cibecue Day School on the Fort Apache Indian Reservation near Cibecue, Ariz., where they are residing.

Anniversaries are observed at open house

SUBLETTE—The 25th wedding anniversaries of Mr. and Mrs. Clint Bonnell, rural Amboy, and the Marvin Bonnells, Sublette, were celebrated at an open house Sunday afternoon in the Sublette Community Hall.

Hosts for the event were children of the honored couples, and Miss Barbara Bonnell registered 250 guests from Sublette, Dixon, Oregon, West Brooklyn, Polo, Maple Park, Aurora, Sterling, Ashton, Plainfield, Van Orin, Compton, Triumph, Rockford, Rochelle, La Moille, Amboy and Mendota.

The refreshment table held two four-tiered cakes topped by 25th anniversary ornaments, and white dove figurines decorated two heart-shaped cakes bearing the names of the honorees and the dates of their weddings.

The cakes were served by Miss Sue Bonnell, Miss Lois Bonnell and Miss Judith Hoyle, and presiding at the punch bowl and coffee service were Miss Joanne Heinzerth and Miss Sharon Bonnell.

Decorations for the open house were in rainbow colors, and additional assistants were Miss Carolyn Floto, Miss Lisa Floto and Miss Sue O'Brien.

Travelogue for Wesleyans

Tuesday night's scramble dinner for the First United Methodist Church Wesleyan Society in the church dining hall, was followed by an illustrated program presented by Mr. and Mrs. Paul Schmitt and Dr. and Mrs. L. W. Hinkle on their recent travels in Spain, Morocco and Portugal on a church-sponsored tour.

The program also included a reading by Mrs. Katherine LeFevre, and a business session was conducted by Merle Smith, president of the organization.

Dr. and Mrs. Robert W. Schumm, co-chairmen of the evening's committee, were assisted by Mr. and Mrs. James Pettenger, Mrs. B. R. Jacobson and Mrs. Maude Mason.

Mrs. Cramer to be hostess

Mrs. Hazel Cramer, 607 Carroll Ave., will entertain Circle 17, Military Order of Lady Bugs, at 7:30 p.m. Monday and members are asked to bring labels, coupons and stamps, which they have collected for a hospital project.

Grange party

Members of the Rock River Grange have planned a card party for 8 p.m. Saturday in the Grange Hall when games of 500 and pinochle will be arranged.

Committee members will include Mrs. R. H. Barnhart and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Gerdes.

Dear Ann by Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: It's too late for advice, but I'd like to say a word in behalf of old-fashioned morality and sexual conduct which you have upheld through the years — and I laughed at.

J. and I are college seniors. When we met in our sophomore year there was instant chemistry. After a few weeks we decided to have a "meaningful relationship." (This means sleeping together.) We talked about getting married after graduation and I thought we had an understanding.

Last night when I asked J. whether he wanted a June wedding on campus or a wedding in my church his answer stunned me. "No rings, no strings — that was our agreement."

We talked a long time and he expressed his views clearly. He said a ceremony or a piece of paper means nothing. He pointed to the divorce rate. He then cited the number of married people who are bored to death, or cheating, swinging, swapping and so on. He feels that when two people love each other they should stay together and remain faithful because they WANT to, not because they are obligated by law.

I am shattered and heartsick. I must now ask myself, why should he want to marry me? He has all the advantages of marriage and none of the responsibilities. I bought a philosophy that has made me ashamed of myself and cheated me out of what I wanted most. Since the youth of today believes in telling it like it is, I hope the girls out there who have bought the free-love line will read my letter and give it serious thought because this is the way it is. — Bittersweet

Dear B.: No situation is a total loss if you learn from it. Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: I was surprised at your brutal attack on the medical profession. You said in a recent column: "What gives ME a pain is doctors who fail to advise patients who have no organic illness that they need counseling, and instead give them pills and tell them there is nothing wrong with them."

As a person who has lived 70 years and spent a lifetime in health service, I can tell you that people do not want a doctor to tell them, "It's all in your head. There's nothing wrong with you." They consider it the same as being told, "You are nuts." Furthermore such people will invariably go from doctor to doctor until they find one who will give their illness a name or sell them an operation.

A patient who has no organic illness responds much better to a pill which has nothing in it but sugar — or a $3 bottle of tonic that won't help him but won't hurt him either. It has been proven that people who need a psychological lift often get it from innocuous prescriptions. It makes them feel better, and after all, this is what counts, isn't it? — Santa Barbara

Dear Santa B.: The patient who takes a sugar pill or a swig of $3 tonic that won't help him but won't hurt him either is not solving his problem. What he needs is to find out what's bugging him and how to deal with it. Only then will he be able to eliminate the psycho-generated aches and pains.

Confidential to Oakland Heartache: Guts it through. Some men never grow up. Your husband spends more for his "toys" than he has a right to. Until he realizes he's behaving childishly and WANTS to grow up, there is nothing you can do. (Copyright 1972, Publishers-Hall Syndicate)

Miss Unger, Mr. Pfoutz are engaged

MISS CHRISTINE UNGER

ASHTON — Mr. and Mrs. Clarence R. Unger announce the engagement of their daughter, Christine Mary, to Charles Glenn Pfoutz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Pfoutz Jr.

Miss Unger, a 1971 graduate of Ashton High School, is employed in the laboratory of Crest Foods Company.

Her fiancé served two years in the Army following his 1968 graduation from Ashton High School, and is presently an apprentice plumber with Heckman Plumbing and Heating Company.

No definite wedding date has been selected by the engaged couple.

Celebrate anniversary

LEE CENTER — The silver wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Jeanblanc was celebrated at a recent dinner in Eddie's Supper Club, Grand Detour, when guests included the Floyd Nobles, Mr. and Mrs. James Noble, Mrs. Delores Haley, the Donald Nobles and Mr. and Mrs. Keith Noble, all of Amboy.

The former Miss Dorothy Noble and Mr. Jeanblanc were married Dec. 28, 1946, in Polo by the Rev. B. Wayne Crist, and were attended by Miss JoAnne Haley and the bridegroom's brother, Howard Jeanblanc.

The Jeanblancs are parents of four children, Mrs. Patrick (Chris) Mulvany, who resides in Mayport, Fla., where her husband is stationed as an ensign in the Navy; Steven, who is stationed with the Army in Frankfurt, Germany; James, Franklin Grove, and Charles, Morrison. They also have three grandchildren, Stephanie Jeanblanc, Frankfurt, Germany; Jason Jeanblanc, Franklin Grove, and Gregg Mulvany, Mayport.

Ma-Di-Na unit

Mrs. Daniel Hembrough, Mrs. Harold Wiggins and Mrs. George Pitzer Jr., were co-hostesses at Monday night's meeting in Loveland Community House for 21 members of the Ma-Di-Na Homemakers Extension Unit and a guest, Mrs. Olive Allen.

Mrs. Richard Otto and Mrs. David Gusse presented a major lesson on "Management for the Busy Homemaker," and a minor lesson on "Looking Ahead" was given by Mrs. Ronald Boehle.

Unit members will entertain their husbands at a dinner planned for 6:30 p.m. Feb. 5 at Emerald Hill Country Club, and reservations are to be made before Feb. 1 with Mrs. Donald Sheets or Mrs. Kenneth Brierton. Plans were also made to decorate cookies for nursing home residents at 7 p.m. Monday with Mrs. Frank Meyer, 418 E. Bradshaw St.

A joint meeting with the Dixon Evening Homemakers Extension Unit was scheduled for Feb. 14 in Loveland House when Mrs. Meyer and Mrs. Alvin Harden Jr., will represent the Ma-Di-Na Unit as local leaders.

Betty Canary

There are always those evenings when the nearest we care to be to anyone is equal to about the distance between here and the Seychelles Islands.

It isn't that we don't love the other members of our family. It's just that, for one moment (or, possibly even an hour and a half) we'd like to be allowed to recover from the rigors of the day.

In the past, the only way a man could tell the mood of his wife was by tossing his hat in the door when he returned from work. If she threw it back at him, it was One of Those Days. The only way a woman could tell if her husband had been wounded during his foray into Business Jungle was to cast a worried glance and judge for herself.

In this technological age, the least we can do is come up with something a bit more scientific and reliable. My own invention is called an Irritation Index. Ideally, there should be two in every home—one for the husband and one for the wife.

Placed in a strategic spot (so the proper attitude for the day can be checked before approaching each other) the Irritation Index should help us attain a more harmonious relationship with each other inside the home.

Each person knows his emotional levels and, therefore, must make his own warning chart. Approximate levels of irritability might be:

- Hers:
- 1—Your Coming Home is Happytime!
 - 2—Warning! Wilted Woman Waiting.
 - 3—And don't ask what I've been doing all day!
 - 4—I'm dressing to go out to dinner.
- His:
- 1—Good afternoon. Gorgeous.
 - 2—Watch out! Weary Worker in Area.
 - 3—Available before dinner only in emergencies.
 - 4—Bring me a drink—or ELSE!

League board meeting at Emerald Hill

The executive board of the League of Women Voters met Monday at Emerald Hill Country Club when the league president, Mrs. Robert Collins, announced the 1972 national convention for May 1-5 in the Marriott Motor Hotel, Atlanta, Ga.

The organization's national program, which will be adopted at the convention, was reviewed by board members, and Mrs. Collins also announced a regional meeting for Jan. 22 in LaSalle.

Mrs. Cloyd Myers, voters service chairman, discussed plans for voter registration to be conducted in cooperation with Sauk Valley College students and the Rock Falls Optimists Club when Louis Pignatelli Jr., will serve as coordinator. The final date for registration is Feb. 21.

New publications on display included "The Hasty Lady Cookbook," published by the Illinois League of Women Voters, and copies will soon be available from members of the local league.

The next board meeting was announced for Feb. 7 at Emerald Hill.

THE NUMBER'S GAME

Here's the population explosion in personal terms. To the proud parents, it's their first child — and they love her! But to the statisticians, who deal only with cold facts, she's just one more person on an already crowded earth.

What a dilemma! We want children, but we want them to face a secure future. When almost no one is optimistic about the present, how can anyone look forward to the future?

Other generations have faced momentous problems, too. Yet, with God's help, they surmounted them.

And God — if we turn to His Church — will do the same for us!

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb— Much has been said on heart and vascular disease, yet we find the term vascular disease used in other terms of illness. Just what is vascular disease? Can it be part of arthritis?

Dear Reader— Correctly speaking, vascular disease means disease of any of the arteries, veins or the small connecting vessels between the arteries and veins called capillaries. Since the vascular system of arteries, veins, and capillaries are everywhere almost any disease process can involve the vascular system. The most common form of vascular disease that causes real trouble is atherosclerosis, or fatty deposits in the arteries. This can be located anywhere in the body, causing strokes, heart attacks, poor circulation to the legs with trouble walking, kidney failure and other problems. Vascular disease technically includes varicose veins and other vein disorders. Even hemorrhoids are a vascular disease.

By now you are getting the idea that the term vascular disease is not a very specific term. We use it to help us classify disorders, just like digestive diseases include indigestion, constipation and even gallbladder disease. When it is necessary to speak about something more specific, other words have to be used, like coronary artery disease to mean involvement of the arteries to the heart.

Dear Dr. Lamb— I coughed up a tape worm. Do you think I have more? Please comment and advise.

Dear Reader— If you really did, you probably have more. A tapeworm is a flat ribbonlike worm. The head usually has a number of hooks on it and it hooks into the intestinal wall. The ribbonlike segments come loose easily, but the head does not. I get a surprising number of letters from people who think they have worms. Far more than I would have ever guessed. So let me emphasize to anyone who ever coughs up or passes what they think are worms— save it—and take it to their doctor. What to save it in? Put it in a small jar of alcohol that you can get from the drugstore or grocery store. Your doctor will likely want to do additional examinations, but it could help him a lot if he can see just what you are talking about.

I might add that I am also surprised at the geographic location. You live in Wisconsin for example—an area where cold weather would normally make worm infections less likely.

The Worry Clinic

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE

CASE 8-571: Sharon G., aged 39, is worried.

"Dr. Crane," she began, "what is wrong with my husband?"

"He used to be interested in steak and potatoes."

"He sneered at my fancy salads and other attempts at culinary appetizers."

"For he grumbled that 'Food is food' and also argued that we wives spend too much time conjuring up exotic dishes."

"But after he passed the age of 40, he suddenly began to take a great interest in rose wine and French cuisine."

"In fact, he began to cook special dishes, just as a hobby."

"Now, he spends more time in the kitchen than I do!"

"And can recite the names of all the fancy restaurants in our area, as well as tell what they are especially noted for!"

"What would change a stodgy eater into such a connoisseur of food?"

Wives, Beware

Bluntly, my answer to Sharon was a surprise.

"Sharon," I said, "you have apparently quit serving him adequate cheesecake in the boudoir!"

"Wives, if your husbands begin to talk about various restaurant menus and seem to prefer gastronomic to erotic calories, take care!"

For this is one of the common symptoms of a man whose libido is waning.

Virile young men usually regard all steaks or hamburgers as about alike!

"Food is food," is their laconic remark, just as was true of Sharon's mate 20 years ago.

So when men become connoisseurs of exotic menu items and smack their lips over rare wines, they are on the toboggan that leads to impotence!

Except for professional chefs whose salary depends on fancy menus, it is usually a feminine hobby to concoct new recipes.

It is the wife who thus scallops the edges of the grapefruit, drops a maraschino cherry atop dessert or adds a sprig of parsley to give more color to the dinner plate.

A virile male's primary interest is boudoir cheesecake; not fancy dining room frills.

So when he begins to shift toward the dining room type of calories, you know that he is rapidly drifting toward the female category!

As such, he is becoming a neuter in the erotic realm.

This same excessive interest in garnishing menu items is also typical of the "female" partner in homosexual affairs!

For that "female" partner

Cowboys are pick in Super Bowl VI

By MURRAY OLDERMAN
NEW ORLEANS, La. (NEA)—The facts, ma'am, only the facts. O.K., Sergeant, here they are, pure and simple.

The Dallas Cowboys, on the precipice of Super Bowl VI, have won more games than any team in professional football the last six years. That includes both regular season (63) and playoffs (5).

For that period, Coach Tom Landry has produced victories at a rate of 77 per cent. That's exactly the percentage of the late Vince Lombardi in his hallowed eight-year tenure with the Green Bay Packers.

Landry and the Cowboys are striving mightily to overcome the dogma that Dallas doesn't, quote, win the big ones, unquote.

The impending joust with the miracle kids from Miami to settle the supremacy of pro football (and collect the winners' dividends of $15,000 a man) should erase the misimpression. Which means I'm putting it on the line, right here, that the Dallas Cowboys will win Super Bowl VI, perhaps by a score of XXIV to XIII.

The Cowboys are picked precisely because they are a great team at the peak of success few others have managed. They have won six straight division titles and two conference titles. True, they have not reigned supreme.

They lost one NFL championship game (to Green Bay in 1966) when Dandy Don Meredith was hemmed in two yards from a tying touchdown.

They lost another NFL title (to Green Bay in '67) when Jethro Pugh couldn't get the footing to stop a quarterback sneak on a field frozen by minus-13 degree temperature.

And they fumbled away what has become known as the Stupor Bowl just a year ago, to Baltimore.

All three games were decided as the clock ran out.

That kind of luck usually is delegated to the Italian army.

The Cowboys have come up with the one factor this year that has made them more omnipotent than ever and sublimated the fickle finger of fate. They have a field general, an ex-Navy skipper named Roger Staubach, who adds excitement and emotion to their attack.

They also have a great defensive unit (five of them have been all-pros). And they have Landry, whose impact on modern professional football is still not fully appreciated. He revolutionized defense when he introduced the system of disciplined keys and refined the basic 4-3-4 alignment. He was equally a pioneer on offense with multiple gets.

The Cowboys are supposed to reflect his personality—coldly efficient, unemotional. But actually Tom seethes under a placid exterior. And he is a practical person who was able to work controversial running back Duane Thomas back into the lineup.

The Miami Dolphins, on paper, aren't in the Cowboys' class. But they are hopped up by two straight sensational performances in the playoffs. Coach Don Shula has done a remarkable job in turning around a bedraggled franchise that, since being organized in 1966, had never won more than five games until last year.

Bob Griese, the first AFL-bred player to win the Jim Thorpe Trophy, symbolizes the young spirit of the club.

DOGGED DETERMINATION

Nebraska's Devaney to retire soon?

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — Bob Devaney, who as head coach of Nebraska has won two consecutive national football championships, says he may retire. If he does, he'll do so without ever being chosen Coach of the Year.

Shortly after a vote Thursday of the American Football Coaches Association chose Paul "Bear" Bryant of Alabama and Harold "Tubby" Raymond of Delaware as coaches of the year in their divisions, Devaney said he is considering stepping down from his coaching post of 10 years.

"I've been thinking about it after each of the last three seasons," he said. "I'm going back home and make a decision within a couple of weeks."

"It's a lot better, I guess, to step out when you're at the top than when you're losing. At least nobody's nudging me now."

Despite his success in 15 years of major college coaching and being one of the eight finalists for Coach of the Year six times, Devaney, 56, has never won. He said if he had taken the honor this year, he probably would still make the same decision on retirement.

Bryant is the first coach to win to win the coaching honor outright twice in the balloting of the 1,700 members of the AFCA. He won it first in 1961, then shared it in 1963 with Darrell Royal of Texas.

Raymond, 45, has been at Delaware for 18 years, the first 12 as an assistant coach. The Blue Hens were 10-1 last season, including a Boardwalk Bowl victory over C. W. Post 72-22.

Former Hub star shines

CHAMPAIGN— Stronger play from 6-7 center Tom Carmichael was one of the most notable improvements of the University of Illinois freshmen basketball team as Coach Jim Wright's squad returned to action following the holiday break—taking another of its patented squeaker wins Tuesday night, 82-80, over Indiana State.

Wright hopes the new-found aggressiveness of the non-scholarship performer from Rochelle continues as the Illini yearlings seek to go above the .500 level Saturday against Champaign-based Parkland Junior College. Tip-off is scheduled for 12:30 p.m.

The freshmen, after a layoff of 26 days, used Carmichael's team-leading 15 rebounds and a double-figure performance from four players to beat Indiana State and bring their record to 3-3. Guard Otto Tucker led the way in points with 25.

The Parkland game, first of two between the teams this season, will offer some interesting matchups. Tucker, an all-state guard at Paris High School last season, could square off against his former running mate, Rick Gosnell, a guard for the Cobras. Meanwhile, St. Joseph-Ogden product Rick Schmidt, second-leading Illini yearling scorer, will be facing several players he went against as a prep.

Another Cobra performer, guard Jack Harrison of Streator, is the younger brother of former Illini standout and assistant freshman coach Jodie Harrison.

Frazier to be on TV

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Heavyweight champion Joe Frazier will enter many homes Saturday night via television. Most fight followers feel the visit will be a short one.

Talk about Frazier's scheduled 15-round title fight with Terry Daniels Saturday night concerns not who will win but how quickly will Frazier win.

The champion is such an overwhelming favorite that Las Vegas bookmakers did not establish a betting line.

As for Frazier, the only prediction he will make is that the Dallas Cowboys will beat the

"I'm not taking him any lighter than any other fighter," Frazier said of Daniels.

"I'm just not a guy that's coming here to make a buck," said Daniels who lost three of 10 fights in 1971, one of them a four-round knockout by Jack O'Halloran. Doug Lord, Daniels' manager, said Daniels fought O'Halloran with injured ribs.

Both fighters rested today for the bout which is scheduled to start at 10 p.m., EST, at the 9,000-seat Rivergate Auditorium.

Big Ten defenses shining

By JERRY LISKA
Associated Press Sports Writer

Either a defensive trend is developing or the hot hands have cooled off in the young Big Ten basketball race.

Highlighted by the first-place battle between Michigan (2-0) and defending champion Ohio State (1-0) at Columbus, Ohio, Saturday's four-game round finds conference scoring far behind last season's pace after the opening week.

Whereas no fewer than eight clubs last season at this time averaged more than 80 points per game, the current pace has slackened to four teams scoring in the 70 bracket, two in the 60s and two in the 50s.

Among individual scorers, only Ohio State's Alan Hornyak is averaging over 24 points to lead the league with his 28 production in OSU's 78-70 triumph over Purdue.

Last season, such gunners as Indiana's George McGinnis, Michigan's Henry Gilmore and Iowa's Fred Brown were blazing away at a 30-point clip in the early going. Wilmore, only returnee from that trio currently is in a multiple tie for seventh among loop scorers with a 19-point average.

Currently, only four others besides Hornyak are in the 20-point class, including Indiana's Joby Wright with 24.0; Purdue's Bill Franklin with 23.0; Wisconsin's Leon Howard with 22.5, and Michigan's Ernie Johnson with 21.5.

Saturday's card also includes the third still-unbeaten Big Ten entry, Minnesota (1-0), entertaining Northwestern (0-2); Purdue (0-1) at Illinois (1-1) and Wisconsin (1-1) at Indiana (0-1). Only the Northwestern-Minnesota contest is at night.

Michigan, righting itself from an injury-caused early slump resulting in a current overall 7-5 record, could stamp itself the team to beat in the 14-game conference race by triumphing at Ohio State in Saturday's regionally-televised feature.

Michigan's Wolverines spilled fast-starting Illinois on the Illini court, 75-70, Tuesday night without their key big man, Ken Brady, who has been ably replaced by Ernie Johnson.

However, after being sidelined since an October knee operation, the 6-10 Brady is expected to see some service against Ohio State.

Wilmore also is rounding into shape after an earlier injury which, plus return of Brady, prompted Michigan coach Johnny Orr to comment this week: "With these two guys getting back to their real form, we're starting a new season."

Hornyak likewise still isn't going full steam after a pre-season foot bruise with his first full game being against Purdue last Saturday.

Said Buckeye coach Fred Taylor: "I feel sorry for Hornyak. He's playing against people in top flight shape and they're after him. His timing and shooting aren't back, but he's getting closer all the time."

Illinois which stood 9-1 overall before succumbing to Michigan has to overcome a jinx as well as rebound from a ragged outing in hosting Purdue.

Illini coach Harv Schmidt has been winless against the Boilermakers in his four previous seasons, suffering six straight losses.

"We had our worst rebounding performance of the season against Michigan," said Schmidt. "And a home loss in this conference is brutal. But we'll just take them one at a time."

Cage, wrestling tournaments set

NEARLY 340 schools, an all-time high for the state of Illinois, will compete in the state wrestling championship series starting with the district tournaments Feb. 11-12.

Twenty-eight districts will enter the top two wrestlers in each weight division in the seven sectional tournaments to be held the following week.

All area schools will compete in the Rock Falls district, a 13-team event.

Schools entered in the Rock Falls district: Amboy, Ashton, Dixon, Freeport, Galena, Lanark, Polo, Rock Falls, Savanna, Sterling, Sterling Newman, Stockton and Warren.

Tournament manager at Rock Falls is Bruce McDonald. The first session will start Feb. 11 at 6:30, and championship match will be held Feb. 12 at 7 p.m.

Schools from the East Moline (United Township), Peoria Richwoods, Kewanee and Rock Falls districts will enter the Moline sectional, starting Feb. 18 at 7 p.m.

First- and second-place wrestlers in each division at sectional will advance to the state tournament scheduled for Horton Fieldhouse, Illinois State University, Normal, Feb. 25-26.

THE eighth annual Boylan-Guilford Freshman basketball tournament will begin Saturday, and finish Saturday, Jan. 22.

The preliminary and quarterfinals will be played Jan. 15, and semifinals and finals will be played Jan. 22.

All upper-bracket games will be played at Boylan High School, which is where Dixon is placed. The lower-bracket games will be played at Guilford.

Dixon sophomores will meet Belvidere Jan. 15 at 2 p.m. and will play either the loser or winner of the Rockford West-Rochelle game in the second game.

Other teams entered in the tournament include Jefferson, Harvard, Boylan, Hononegah, Rockford West, Rockford Auburn, Sycamore, Guilford, Freeport Aquin, Rockford East, DeKalb, Harlem and Freeport.

Admission to the game is $1.50 for adults, and 75 cents for students—all day.

THE Little Eight Varsity Basketball Tournament gets under way Jan. 18 and will finish with the championship game Jan. 21.

Ohio is the host school for the first two days of tourney play, while the final two days' action will be switched to Princeton.

The preliminary action will pit Annawan-La Moille, Tiskilwa-Wyanet, Neponset-Ohio, and Depue-Tampico. All preliminary games will start at 7 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. The Annawan-La Moille and Tiskilwa-Wyanet contests start the tournament Tuesday, and are followed with the semifinals at the same times Wednesday night. The upper bracket semifinals will begin at 7 p.m. with the lower bracket semis due to start at 8:30 Thursday.

The championship game will be played at 8:30 p.m. on Friday.

THE Polo Invitational wrestling tournament will begin Saturday at 10 a.m., followed by sessions at 2 p.m. and the finals and consolation at 6:30 p.m.

This is the first year for the expanded tournament, now an eight-team affair. Teams participating include: Amboy, Erie, Kewanee, Freeport, Stockton, Waterman, Mendota, and Polo.

Kewanee brings two state qualifiers to the tournament, but it only shares the favorite spot with Stockton.

Richard on long road to finally kicking habit

By OWEN EDWARDS
NEW YORK — (NEA) — Richard the Worm is on the agonizing road toward kicking The Habit.

Richard the Worm is a systems analyst who weighs in at around 125 if he leaves on his overcoat and galoshes (which he does most of the time). About the toughest physical contest he gets involved in is sparring with very old ladies for cabs at Grand Central Station and he usually loses.

The Habit, for Richard the Worm, is professional football. Until this past fall Richard was as unregenerate an addict as a man could be. What he didn't know about the game hadn't been invented yet. Richard the Worm was like a lot of other Americans—armchair coaches, Monday morning quarterbacks and daydream Sunday heroes all rolled into one out-of-shape package. For him there was simply no other sport than football.

During the past season little things began to happen that finally ended the love affair between Richard the Worm and pro football. It's hard to know what started the break, but it may have been Astroturf. Playing the game on wall-to-wall plastic struck Richard as positively unnatural, not to mention un-American.

Then, too, there seemed to be a lot of teams all of a sudden. When Richard the Worm first got hooked on the game there was only one league, the NFL, chest deep in legends. Then came the AFL, and expansion.

The advent of the Monday night games didn't help, either. Richard knew, of course, that since the first lion smacked its chops in the Roman Coliseum, sports events have been a form of theater, possibly the finest form, all things considered. But he liked to believe that at the heart of the most dramatically performed power sweep there was the essential contest of strong men against strong men.

But on Monday nights the games were packaged and merchandised like so much yogurt.

It did not take a football addict like him to know that football belonged to the weekend like the stock market belonged to weekdays. He began to suspect that money finally mattered more than hallowed tradition.

With more teams and more competition for the television advertising dollar, the abilities of quite ordinary players seemed to be inflated. Lead-footed stumblers with tunnel vision who weren't fit, in Richard's opinion, to carry water for such erstwhile greats as Jim Brown, Paul Hornung and Y. A. Tittle were being credited by announcers with superhuman qualities. Richard began to bet cynical.

Football has never exactly been a spelling bee, but last season Richard noticed that injuries were playing an ever more important role in the game. The teams that came out on top were those who physically crippled more of their opponents than crippled them, and Richard the Worm, though he had his bloodthirsty moments, held that to be a negative sort of virtue.

The final blow came when Richard made a business trip to London. He found himself watching a soccer match on the telly, possibly misled by the fact that the English have the gall to call a game played with the feet football.

Richard discovered that for the first time in years he was able to watch the faces of the players during the game, not just when they were selling razor blades. By the end of the game he felt a real identification with the players in a way that he no longer could with the masked and armored gladiators of American football.

And that did it. Richard the Worm came home and did the impossible: He went out and took a long, quiet walk during the Super Bowl. Never even found out who won. He had kicked The Habit. It hasn't been easy, of course, and the scorn of other addicts has made it tougher. But he's finding out that there are other sports. Recently, the NBA grinning faces and all, are satisfying his competition lust. By summer he may even be able to accept baseball.

But Richard the Worm knows that next season, beginning in August with the College All-Star game, will be the real test. Right now all he plans to do on Sunday afternoons in the fall is lie in his backyard with his nose pressed into a brownie patch of real grass. On Monday nights he and a determined band of ex-football fans are going to the Y to shoot baskets.

Maybe he'll make it. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Court strikes baseball for anti-lady ump stand

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — New York's highest court has struck out the New York-Pennsylvania Baseball League and the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues in their efforts to keep a lady umpire out of professional baseball.

The 41-year-old housewife from Queens has been trying since her 1967 graduation from Florida Umpire School to get into pro ball.

Here's hoping that Sunday's pro championship game between Dallas and Miami is better entertainment than Wednesday night's Super Comedy Bowl hour on TV. We managed to watch the first 12 minutes of the "show" and that was all. We're still going with Miami by 3 points. Congratulations to Joe Vitale on the opening of the all-new Joe's Pizza at 119 Peoria Avenue. His accomplishment is even more remarkable when you consider that it was only a few years ago that Joe arrived here from Italy with little money, scant knowledge of the language, but a lot of intestinal fortitude and determination. His success is even more amazing in these times when so many nationally franchised food operations are in difficulty.

The near-springlike temperatures of last weekend induced a dozen or more area residents to make their season's debut on the golf course. We spotted about nine players at Emerald Hill and another three or four at Dixon Country Club Sunday.

We tip our hat to PLEASURE, the 5-man group currently entertaining at Dixon's Ramada Inn, for taking time out today to entertain the residents at the Dixon State School. Gestures like this should go a long way toward restoring man's faith in man. Incidentally, our spies tell us PLEASURE does a great job on old standards, in addition to current tunes. Stop out and see them in action, they're good.
